Until the invention of our Equalizing Scale, it had become an established fact that the Piano, one of the most expensive musical instruments, was the somest of all to fail.

No other makers by any scale have ever been able to produce a Piano that did not so depreciate in a few years that its former loved and inspiring tones gradually gave place to a thirt, wiry sound, rendering the Piano almost intolerable to any musical ser-

Total Black Horse, with a small spot on the forchead, about the size of a beautifully arched neck, heavy sich. The filler, and will weigh about 1,200 pounds, has a very fine head, large, full eyes, closely ribbed up without and broad, in the chest, showing immense lung power, has a very strong back and is and A No. If ey. In good barrel, very round hind quarters, large arm, immense bone and nuscle, with splendid stifle joint, is or and legs. Is very compactly built and his form is very blood like, in brief his whole contour and general make up these of exceeding beauty and symmetry, and comes as near being a model horse as one would see if he were to travel around the world. His style and action in harness is unsurpassed, having a proud carriage and an exceedingly fast walk. PEDIGREE.

VOUNG VENTURE, 227; he by Belmont, son of American Boy, and he by Sea Gult, son of Imported Expedition. YOUNG VENTURE'S dam was ADA MORRILL, a mare purchased in Vermont by Mr. Treat, for 1,200 dollars. She was a very fast mare; being kept as a broad mare and never used for racing she had no public record, but was able to do a mile in 2.30 any day of the week except Sunday. She was sired by Young Morrill, record to saddle 2.23, and sire of Fearmaught, record 2.23; and Glide 2.24, Young Morrill by Old Morrill, he by the Jennison horse, son of the Vance horse, son of Imported Messin-The subject of breeding is of such importance that it has in the last few years, led to the production of many elaborate works on the subject by the most able Horsemen of the day, which are both instructive and interesting; but as these authorities all differ to greater or less extent, the intelligent breeder, after a careful perusal of them, is obliged to adopt a line of his own, and depend upon his own judgment in a measure as to the proper selection of the noimals to obtain the best results. In my own experience in the matter I have always followed one rule, which is so simple that it can be contained in a nutshell, this was to breed the best mares that I could get to the very best stallion that I could find, and I have never yet been disappointed with the results, and I believe that every person so doing is on the right track. Time and experience has proved to us all that it pays only to raise the very best, as the prozeny of inferior sizes amount to very little above the cost of raising, whereas the colts from a standard bred horse will always be saleable at remunerative raises, but as this must by all minds be admitted as a self-evident trait. I will not dilate upon it.

If evident truth, I will not dilate upon it. I believe that I offer to the public, in YOUNG VENTURE, a combination of blood that is worthy of the attention of the most critical Horsemen. On the side of his sire he traces through strictly thoroughbred lines direct to Imported Expedition, from whom so many flyers have descended; and on the side of his dam through the most popular frotting lines direct to Imported Messinger, which is as every Horsemen knows, the fountain head of the American trotting horse. These qualifications, together with his fine size, style, cutor and magnificent frotting action combine, to make him one of the most valuable horses for STOCK PURPOSES that could possibly be found. He is a sure breeder is very kind and gentle, finely broken both single and double, and as a tray-for exceedingly speeds. He has never been regularly trained, but I will show a quarter of a mile with him in FORTY SECONDS, or FORFEIT FIVE HUNDIED DOLLARS. But better than all this, is his colls, of which there are now about a force in the capacity and they are without single exception, first-class in every particular, all which there are now about a dozen in the country, and they are without single exception, first-class in every particular, all bearing a strong resemblanace to their sire, being greatly admired by every one for their beauty, thus proving that the horse is FOR GOOD PASTURAGE will be furn shed for mares sent from a distance at the VERY LOW RATE OF ONE DOLLAR PER MONTH, and due care taken to prevent socidents, but no responsibility will be assumed should any occur.

TF I will give $50 GOLD COIN to the person exhibiting the BEST COLT FOALED IN 1883, sired by YOUNG VENTURE, and out of a native mare; $30 to the second and $20 to the third best colts, to be exhibited in Wailaka, Sep-C. B. MILLES, Makawao, Ma Boys' all wool suits from $4 up, at CHS. TIE E

SAYINGS OF MENCIUS. Quotations and comments prepared for the P. C.

ADVERTISER.) One striking feature in these ancient writings of Chinese sages, who flourished several centuries before the Christian era, is the discussion of principles of government and of social organaization. The principles set forth, are such as must meet the approval of the most advanced thought of this age. These sages advocate in every chapter of their works, the duties of man to man, and that social order and government are for the best welfare of the whole people; and not for the glory or pride of Princes or Rulers. The sayings of Mencius in particular should be inscribed on high in letters of gold in every court of Christen-dom. Note what Mencius says in the Book Kung-

Sun Chow, part 1. "Those Princes (or kings) remain undistinguished in the government of a realm, who seek in the officers around their person, men whom they teach and use; and do not desire officers or ministers by whom they might be taught and

And note what Meneius says of the principles that should govern an officer or minister in his relation to his Sovereign and to public opionion. " He who is in charge of an office, when he is prevented from filling its duties, ought to take bility of giving his opinion, take his de-words unattended to, ought also to parture. The above words express the sense of igh ministerial honor. This is seldom acted upo except by men of very superior character, and held in high esteem by their fellow-citizens, who have a keen sense of nobility of conduct, as beyond all advantage of place or emolument. Men of inferior character, and without claims to pubblic consideration will regard nothing, but the simple question of their living. The most notable instance we have of a high sense of ministerial honor was that of Ashtophel, who when his coun-sel was ignored by his Prince, saddled his ass, got himself to his house and there hanged hima high degree of official sensitivness as manifested by the Jewish counsellor; but he evidently scorned the character that could accept emolument along with neglect and contumely. Now, Mencius was a frequent counsellor and adviser of princes and kings, without pay or place, and was neglected and ignored on certain occasions, whereupon, "Yin Tze spake about him critically to others, saying: 'He came many le (the third of a mile) to wait on the king (of Tzc) and he was not made a Tang or a Woo (certain ranks of nobility). If he knew that he would not be made such, his service and advice showed his want of intelligence, to let himself be so used. If he did not know anything of such rank and opportunity, and came to the court notwithstanding, that shows that he was seeking a self. The Chinese sage never contemplated such

The disciple Kaou informed Mencius of these remarks of Yin Tre. Mencius said : "Yin Tze does not know mo. When I came many le to wait on the king, it was what I desired to do for the good of the country. The king did not regard my counsel, and yet I did not hasten my departure, hoping that the king might change. The king did not send after me; and yet I did not give up the king. The king after all is one who may be led to do good. And if he were to use me, would it not be for the welfare of the whole people of Tze? Am I a little tempered man, who when not accepted by the king, will get angry, speak evil, and with passion displayed in his countenance, will go on his way to denounce the king?" When Yin Tze heard these words, he said : "I am indeed a small man." And there are many small men of this day, and in this country, who should reflect on these words of the sage. Mencius in commenting upon the character of a king said: "Therefore a ruler who is endowed with talents and virtue will be gravely complaisant and economical in the management of his affairs, showing a respectful politeness to his ministers, and not taking anything from the people except in accordance with regulated limits." Mencius giving advice to the minister of a Prince gave the following remarkable advice :

"You must exert yourself to the utmost, to promote a benevolent government. Now the first thing towards a peaceful and benevolent government must be to lay down accurately the boundaries of the lands." Can anything wiser be said in regard to the ruling of a State, after a lapse of 2,400 years?

The chief cause of trouble and litigation in a new State is unsettled boundaries. California knows this at great cost and loss of peace. Let Hawaii heed the words of Mencius and have all her land boundaries speedily and definitely An ascetic r complete puriosopher named Hen I and consequence of the Prince of Tang, who had organized a treasury, a storehouse and arsena lin connection with the government of the country.

He said; "A true prince should cultivate the ground equally and along with the people, and eat the fruit of his own labor." Mencius said: "I suppose that Hen Hing sows grain and cats the produce. Is it not so?" "It is so, " was the answer. I suppose also he weaves cloth, and wears his own manufacture, Is not so?" No, Hen procures hair cloth. He gets it in exchange for grain." "Why does not Hen weave it himself?" That would interfere with his husbandry. Mencius then said, "the getting the articles you need in exchange for grain, is proper. The business of the handicraftsman can by no means be carried on along with the business of husbandry. And so government cannot be carried on in connection with the practice of any industry. Some labor with their minds, and some labor with their strength. Those who labor with their minds govern others; those who labor with their strength are governed by the thinkers. The ruler must not be engaged in any business,-but the business of government."

Mencius commenting upon the character of an eminent man, made these remarks : " To dwell in the wide house of the world, to stand in the righteous seat of the world, and to walk in the path of right. When he obtains office, to practice his principles for the good of his people, and when that desire of office is disappointed, to practice them alone. To be above the power of riches and honors, to make him proud and dissipated; above that of poverty and mean condition, to make him swerve from principle; and power and force cannot make him bend. These characteristics constitute a great
